

YOLO COUNTY DEMOCRAT.

SATURDAY, MAY 1, 1899.

DEMOCRATIC STATE CENTRAL COMMITTEE.—The members of the Democratic State Central Committee are hereby notified to attend a meeting to be held at the Rooms of the Secretary, No. 231 California street, on WEDNESDAY, May 12th, at 12 o'clock M.

JOSEPH P. HOGG,
President State Central Committee.
THOS. N. CARR, Secretary.

A Parting Word.

With the present issue of the Democrat the undersigned intends retiring from newspaper life to attend to other affairs. During my pleasant relationship with the Democrat I have been actuated by an earnest desire to promote the best interests of the party and perform the duty of a journalist to the best of my ability. In taking leave of its readers apologies are therefore unnecessary. I entertain a sentiment of respect toward friends who have differed with me in opinion as well as those who have approved my course and rendered me valuable assistance, and in treasuring up the memory of agreeable associations with the patrons of the paper, I find no room in my heart to harbor malice toward my enemies.

W. A. HENRY.

For the Democrat.

Illinois Celebrities—No. 1.

Lincoln and Douglas, opposing candidates for the Presidency, were Illinoisans. Lincoln and Grant, successive Presidents of the United States, were Illinoisans. Indeed, it will hardly be disputed that the Prairie State has furnished men who have been quite prominent in the affairs of the present age.

The sun, moon and stars shine in the natural heavens. In like manner a gradation of lights is found to shine in the political constellation. In contemplating the sun, we do not cease our admiration of the moon and stars.

Illinois, it is true, lays claim to such men as Douglas, McDougall, Hardin, Baker and Lincoln; but her celebrities do not end there. Of them, I have known many personally and more by reputation. Such being the fact, I have thought of penning for the readers of the Democrat sketches of prominent Illinoisans. Not as politicians, but as men and countrymen it is my purpose to consider them. In executing the proposed task I interest and amuse some of my readers, and neither tire nor fatigue any of them, I will be satisfied.

In the group of characters to pass in review, Hardin, Baker and Lincoln form an interesting trio. I introduce them together on account of coincidences in their career hereafter to be pointed out. I cannot now finish what I purpose to say of them. I do not wish to mar the unity of my plan. John J. Hardin, Edward D. Baker and Abraham Lincoln are, therefore, reserved for the next number.

ILLINOISIAN.

NEPOTISM.—The favoritism shown by Gen. Grant for his relatives and particular friends in the distribution of fat offices has caused a great deal of unfavorable comment in the Radical party as well as among Democrats. In the following letter from Thomas Jefferson to a kinsman seeking for place, the views of the great statesman on the subject are set forth quite pointedly and in direct opposition to Grant's idea of providing for his special favorites at the public crib:

DEAR SIR: The public will never be able to believe that an appointment of a relative is made on the ground of merit alone, unassisted by family views; nor can they ever see with approbation offices, the disposal of which they intrust to their President for public purposes, divided out as family property. Mr. Adams degraded himself indignantly by his conduct on this subject, as Washington had done himself the greatest honor. With two such examples to proceed by, I should be doubly inexorable to err. It is true that this places the relations of the President to the public good, which cannot be effected if his confidence be lost, requires this sacrifice. Perhaps, too, it is compensated by sharing in the public esteem.

THOMAS JEFFERSON.

BOILERSTING UP THE CONSTITUTION.—The amalgamationists are the true patriots (!) To use their own favorite and expressive term, they are "oil" to the backbone. They are now propping up the Constitution. The fourteenth amendment says, "the public debt is valid." That means, if it means anything, that the debt shall be paid. The Constitution then disposed of the debt question. But it appears that Congress has some doubt regarding the confidence of the people in that Constitutional declaration: the "oil" party, knowing they had tinkered that sacred document almost out of its original features, had strong doubts about the acceptance of the people of that fourteenth amendment, so they bolstered it up, by the passage of what they term the "Public Credit Bill," which is expected to clinch the sacredness of the big debt, etc., etc. The people are now rapidly arriving at the opinion that Congress itself does not honestly believe that debt will ever be paid, and that the result of all the legislative contrivances to keep up the credit of the national bonds will end in complete or partial repudiation. [New York Daily Book.

TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.—The State Teachers' Institute will meet at Lincoln Hall, in San Francisco, on Tuesday the 4th inst., and continue in session four days. Superintendent Fitzgerald has cordially invited teachers from all parts of the State to be present.

CLOTHING.—O. C. Hastings & Co., clothiers of San Francisco, have become one of the most popular firms on the coast. Their immense monthly sale of goods made by them is evidence of their prosperity and fair dealing.

Amusements of the Press.

The Sacramento Bee comments upon the abusive policy which characterizes a portion of the press of this State, and more especially of this city, and asks if we are desirous of emulating the journals of Oregon, which have, by persistence in a wrong course, acquired an unsavory odor. The Bee says, in this connection:

"The Bulletin having said that the Herald was consumptive, was being kept up by contributors, that merchants and grain dealers were being bored to give $500 or $5,000 toward that fading institution, the Herald comes back at the Bulletin and calls its editors 'scoundrels, catfish, liars, buzzards, sycophants, assassins of readers, calumniators of the public, flatterers of wealth, persecutors of the poor, vagabonds, vipers,' and a whole column of the vilest epithets imaginable is slung at them with considerable force."

"The Union referred the other day to a San Francisco contemporary as an 'ignorant scoundrel,' and the Alta insinuated that the Union people were 'unmanly asses,' whereupon the Union tells the Alta 'Notist' that he is but a Merry Andrew—a fool at last.' A like endearment seems to exist between the Solano Herald and Vallejo Chronicle, and between the Sacramento Reporter and Marysville Appeal. These personalities are unprofessional, and by no means interesting to the public. The Oregon papers were wont to carry off the palm of billingsgate; but their moral tone has much improved of late, and now we fear that this unenviable reputation will be transferred from that State to this. Some of our journals that have in the past been conducted with propriety and good taste which belong to education. The time has gone by when there existed a public which could be reached and stirred by the fulmination of concentrated blackguardism; and the attempt to revive such an impossible condition of things, betrays an intellect which might have rendered its possessor notorious in the days of semi-federal barbarism in Ireland, described by Lever in some of his earlier novels, but which can be no more revived in this country and at this time, than the Pyrrhic games, or the infamous rites of Bona Dea. The modern who peruses such articles as our contemporary speaks of must be either a disgraced or an ignorant man, or a man who can be obtained from the study of such incubations of a ghastly and unwholesome character. The general diffusion of education in this country has fortunately—perhaps inevitably—resulted in the growth of a sentiment which refuses to accept abuse as a substitute for argument. The fulsome rant and its chancery language which our forerunners in journalism were wont to palm upon a half-educated community as vigorous satire and burning wit, has been, by common consent, relegated, for some years past, to the lowest class of the people; and it is now no fiction to assert that the word 'billingsgate' is a sufficient definition of a style of language which is never met with save in the haunts of vice—and which, when admitted to the columns of the press, stigmatizes that journal which stoops to accept and use it, as a low and contemptible publication."

There has been, as the Bee truly asserts, too much of this kind of writing in the California newspapers; but it is well that the press should comprehend—that the public of to-day have far outgrown any such ill-considered and shameful appeals. The picture drawn by Dickens, many years ago, of the 'Fatswagger' and his editor, is doubtless a faithful delineation of a condition of journalism which has almost ceased to exist. Certain it is that the public which once pinned its faith upon such publications exists no longer; and those editors and publishers who continue in this obsolete groove, merely demonstrate their incapacity for the task they have undertaken. When a grave charge is made against a man, a company, or a journal, the public expects that the accused party will clear itself calmly and logically, by the use of such arguments as may be brought to bear, but certainly not by reckless abuse. To call a man a 'villain' or a 'catfish' is not to disprove the accusations which he may have made; and, though there will always be found some persons who will mistake vituperation for argument, the sense of the community holds that abuse indicates merely a low grade of intellect in the abuser. Such exhibitions are neither honorable to the profession of journalism, nor flattering to the general belief in human nature. [San Francisco Times.

SINCE A DREAM.—One of our residents, a member of the legal persuasion, who, of all things, entertains a holy horror of velocipedes, assures us that the following is a fact, which he experienced: Day before yesterday it was necessary for him to proceed on business to Woodland, Yolo county. He was informed that the stage would call for him at a certain hour in the morning, and would not wait for him more than five minutes. He retired with an impression that he should be up at that time or be left. He dreamed that a velocipede was running upon him, and his efforts to escape being run over awoke him—just five minutes before the time set for the stage to call for him. He arose dressed immediately and attained the sidewalk just as the stage drove up. If any one thinks this a canard we can verify it by the affidavit of the legal relator. [Reporter, April 23d.

True, every word of it. The same party once dreaming he was a pilot "on the ocean sailing," thought he struck a rock, and one minute afterward was awakened by being capsized in a buggy on the Woodland and Buckeye road.

CENTRAL PACIFIC RAILROAD.—The character of the work on the Central Pacific has been a subject of much comment and some severe things have been said in condemnation of it, but it seems that those who have examined the road without prejudice generally speak of it in favorable terms. A correspondent of the Bulletin gives his testimony as follows:

It is gratifying to find such excellent construction; the permanent way, even between here (the front) and Elko, in the worst places, is as good as the Vallejo road is now, and the general character of the road is far superior to the California roads.

An Artless Lover.

I know I'm "horrid ugly," Jane,
You scarcely need have stated
That I was "not handsome,"
Because it's antiquated.
And—putting fatality on the shelf—
I tell you, Jane, sincerely,
I think you're pretty plain, yourself,
Although I love you dearly.

Your nose is not the kind of nose
To satisfy a painter:
Your locks are like the red, red rose,
Or just a little fainter
Upon your cheek the glow of youth
Shines best, rosy-colored nearly;
(I'm bound, you know, to tell the truth,
Although I love you dearly.)

It's needless to possess two eyes
Without the least connection;
Where each inquiring optic tries
A contrary direction.
It's very much more useful, though,
Than ornamental, clearly;
I'm sorry that you squint, you know,
Although I love you dearly.

I think I've said enough to prove
You're not a perfect Venus;
(And quite sufficient to remove Unpleasant thoughts between us.)
So, when you converse again
My silence too severely,
You'll catch it, I can tell you, Jane,
Although I love you dearly.

Mr. C. — was in the habit of asking his children to repeat the text on their return from church, to prove that they gave attention. One Sabbath the text was: "Why stand ye here all the day idle? Go into my vineyard and work, and whatsoever is right I will pay thee." Charlie came home, and was asked to repeat the text. He hesitated a moment, and then, as if it just came to him after much thought, he said: "What are you standing round here doing nothing for? Go into my vineyard and go to work, and I'll make it all right with you."

Business Men.—The men who build up a town or a city, who possess energy and force of character, are always the ones who advertise in the newspapers. They have enterprise and liberality, and manifest in all their dealings a desire to live and let live. They, therefore, buy the best goods and make the people know it by advertising judiciously. If you want goods and bargains go to the men who advertise.

A French gentleman at Natchitoches, Louisiana, it is stated, has announced his intention of planting in the Spring of 1869 several acres of poppies and manufacturing opium. It is asserted that an acre of poppies will make fifty pounds of opium, worth from fifteen to twenty dollars a pound, at a cost of less than four dollars a pound for manufacturing, and that one man can cultivate three acres.

The Greenburgh (Ind.) Herald says: Wholes are being bred to live 1,000 years; elephants have been known to live 400; swans 300; ravens 130, and horses 52. The nine lives of a cat entitle it to last fifteen years. Hogs seldom reach 20, although a neighbor of ours, "who was a hog all his life," died a short time since at the advanced age of 95.

"Barfoot, how came you to burn the bread?" "Och! an' it's burnt it is? Sure, then, ma'am, but it's no fault of mine, for wasn't you after telling me, the last thing afore you went out, a large loaf must bake one hour, an' I made three loaves, so I baked 'em three hours just; for what else should I do?"

One of the "broad" style of Western men, said that nothing surprised him so much as to see the New England farmer's "boring holes in the rocks with gimlets, to put in their grain. Why, out West, he added, "We put the grain on a table, and fan it, and it comes up all around!"

The Mayor of Mobile recently married a colored couple. After the ceremony the husband said: "Massa Caleb, you has forgotten something." "What is it, Aaron?" asked the Mayor. "Why, you ain't bussed the bride."

A man in Milwaukee was imprisoned for cruelly beating his wife. Poking his nose through the cell bars, he ejaculated: "I thank God I'm not locked up for any mean, dirty crime, like getting drunk."

An Englishman relates that he recently dined in Nevada with an editor of the Commonwealth who inquired after the health of Tennyson and Thos. T. Carlyle, remarking, "Them men ken sling ink, they ken."

A gentleman in Iowa advertises for a wife "who wears her own hair, her own teeth, her own cheeks, her own buzzum, and her own calves, without having went and gone and paid for them."

A boy eight years old, in one of our public schools, having been told that a reptile "is an animal that creeps," on being asked to name one, promptly replied, "a baby."

A transparent agent has been found in Willamette river, California, inclosing a drop of water. It was exhibited at the last meeting of the California Academy of Sciences.

A correspondent, in describing a recent grand dress ball says of a lady that "she looked sweetly in a plain white muslin dress tucked up to the waist."

The Ladies.—May their virtues exceed even the magnitude of their skirts, while the faults be still smaller than their bonnets.

A mischievous girl being bothered by a number of lovers, has incited them to a public velocipede race for her hand—the winner to win her.

A Boston paper states that a man in that locality is riding a hog through the streets as a preparatory practice to managing a velocipede.

Why don't certain merchants advertise? Because they sell nothing? Why do they sell nothing? Because they don't advertise.

A near woman could persuade man to eat the forbidden fruit, but it took the Devil himself to persuade the woman.

We heard of a man the other day who is so mean that when he weeps, he saves the tears to secure the salt.

Why is a lady whose dress touches the floor like a vagrant? Because she has no visible means of support.

A critical husband says that the only good run of luck he ever had was when his wife ran away from him.

The French describe "firtation" to be the boundary line between friendship and love.
